Contact: Christine Gasparac at (510) 272-6692

Alameda County Supervisor Nadia Lockyer has been selected to receive the 2011 "History Makers Award" for the Second Annual "March into National Women's History Month" event benefitting Lend A Hand Foundation.

The event honors eight Bay Area women, and this year's theme is "celebrating the contributions of powerful women of the Bay." Alameda County Administrator Susan Muranishi, the first Asian-American woman appointed as county administrator in the state, is also receiving the award.

Supervisor Lockyer is the first Latina to be elected to the Alameda County Board of Supervisors and also the Native American woman to serve on the Board.
