I. Federal Legislative Update – CJ Lake

The House and Senate are in session this week. The House will focus on FY17 appropriations while the Senate will finish the FY17 National Defense Authorization bill before turning to appropriations later in the week.

Appropriations

Last week, House Republican leaders enacted a structured rule limiting open debate of all relevant amendments on appropriations bills. House Speaker Paul Ryan informed Members that the Rules Committee had been authorized to block potential “poison pill” amendments on future spending bills. The House will consider the $517.1 billion Defense Appropriations bill this week, which will put Speaker Ryan’s strategy to limit these “poison-pill” amendments to the test. In the past, the Defense spending bill has spurred debate over combating terrorism and the rights of LGBT service members – two areas that may enflame tensions and derail the appropriations process in the House after the shooting in Orlando over the weekend.

The full House Appropriations Committee is scheduled to markup the Homeland Security spending bill tomorrow and also plans to schedule a mark-up on the Interior & Environment spending bill on Wednesday.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell filed a procedural motion on Thursday to proceed to H.R. 2578, the vehicle for the $56.3 billion FY17 Commerce-Justice-Science (CJS) Appropriations bill. The Senate will turn to the CJS Appropriations bill after they vote on the FY17 National Defense Authorization bill. This could also be an area of contention as the CJS spending bill typically includes debate on amendments related to gun control.

The Senate Appropriations Financial Services and Interior-Environment Subcommittees will markup their FY17 spending bills next on Tuesday and Wednesday, with full committee markup scheduled for both bills on Thursday.

Mental Health Reform

The House Energy and Commerce Committee has scheduled a two-day markup of HR 2646, the Helping Families in Mental Health Crisis Act of 2015. As previously reported, Committee Democrats were opposing the legislation that was passed at the Subcommittee level in the fall. However in hopes of garnering Democratic support, Health Subcommittee Chairman Tim Murphy and Chairman of the full Committee, Fred Upton, worked with Democratic leaders to make changes to the bill that addressed their concerns, regarding potential changes to HIPAA laws, the potential dismantling of SAMHSA, and increased funding for the Assisted Outpatient Treatment laws.
The previous version of the bill would have changed health privacy laws to make it easier for caregivers to acquire information about mentally ill people. Democrats warned this would loosen privacy protections for patients. The new version of the bill leaves out these changes and instead shifts the responsibility to the Department of Health and Human Services to address problems with HIPAA.

Democrats also had concerns that the bill would dismantle the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA). The new bill leaves the agency’s administrator in place, and creates a new HHS assistant secretary on top of that.

Democrats also disapproved of increased funding for state Assisted Outpatient Treatment (AOT) laws, which allow judges to order mentally ill people to follow a treatment plan. The new bill eliminates a 2 percent funding increase to states to incentivize AOT laws and instead authorizes new funding that will have to be appropriated separately.
