What is EPSDT

- Early Periodic Screening Diagnosis and Treatment

- A federal draw down program:
  - the feds pay 50%
  - the states pay 50% (of which the counties pay 5% of total costs – county share comes from tobacco master settlement)
Who is eligible for services?

- A child under age 21 on full scope Alameda County Medi-Cal (cannot have share of cost, sensitive services, etc.)

- A child who has a mental health condition that could benefit from treatment
What is unique about services for children 0-5?

- Services do not treat the child in isolation - they are relationship-based & include the primary caretaker in the treatment dyad

- Specialized training is available for service providers in Alameda County
Risk Factors that may warrant EPSDT referral

- Infants & young children with parents who have: a mental health disorder, depression, and/or are substance users
- Infants & young children exposed to abuse, neglect
- Infants and young children exposed to alcohol and/or drugs prenatally
- Infants & young children exposed to community and/or family violence
Additional Risk Factors

- Infants & young children whose parents have poor or compromised parenting skills
- Infants & young children with biological risk and repeated or lengthy early hospitalizations
Behaviors that might warrant an EPSDT referral

- A parent complaining of an overly “fussy baby”
- Aggressive Behaviors (in childcare and in the home)
- Unusual or more frequent than “normal” tantrums
- Withdrawn or avoidant
- Easily disorganized baby or young child
Behaviors (continued)

- Eating & sleeping problems (too much or too little)
- Toileting Problems
- Head Banging and other self injurious behaviors
- Flat Affect
- Inappropriate social behavior (i.e. going to strangers too easily, sexualized behaviors)
- Problems with bonding
What about diagnosis?

- Must have DSM diagnosis to be eligible for services.
  - Most agencies serving the 0-5 population are using the DC 0-3 crosswalk
- A variety of diagnoses can be used, but generally, clinicians try to use the most “non-pathological” diagnosis
- Commonly used diagnoses: “Disorder of infancy, childhood or adolescence NOS”
Helping Families be “ready” for ECMH services

- Many parents are open to help if it is focused on trying to help their child—especially if they are “overwhelmed” with their child’s behavior.

- These programs can help support a parent to help their child.

How do you refer a family for services?

- If you would like the EPSDT agency to contact the family directly, remember to:
  1. Make sure you have a signed or verbal consent from the family allowing you to make the referral
  2. Make sure that you inform the family about the agency that will be calling them
Referring a family for services

If you are making a written or phone referral please include:

- Correct spelling of first and last name of child
- Birthdate
- Social security number or medi-cal number

This is so a determination can be made as to whether this child has full scope medi-cal
What systems barriers impact EPSDT services?

- There is not a resource line (one number) to coordinate & track referrals
- Ensuring that all providers who might be identifying children, have access to information about these services
- Constantly changing landscape in terms of programs needing referrals, being full
