

Delinquency Prevention Network

The Alameda County Probation Department contracts with numerous agencies that work together as the Delinquency Prevention Network. Eleven (11) Youth Service Centers, located throughout Alameda County, offer individual and family counseling services to at-risk youth and their families. Nine (9) of these Youth Service Centers also contract to provide case management services where family needs are identified, resources found, and help with connection to the resource is provided. Five (5) other Community-based Organizations and one school district also provide specific services as part of the Network.

The Youth Service Centers provide family counseling to youth/families referred by probation, schools, and through self-referral. Youth that police have delivered to Malabar House, the County's Crisis Shelter for youth described under 601 of the Welfare & Institutions Code (truant, incorrigible, runaway) are also referred for counseling. These agencies will also serve youth/families that have come to the attention of the Probation Department and/or are on Probation. The agencies' goals are to strengthen families and reduce the risk factors that relate to delinquency.

Please see a list of these agencies and a brief description of their services. They may also provide other services that are helpful to youth/families that are funded through other sources.
